CHURCH ROLLS TO AUGUSTANA

Troy Geldart

THE DAGLIGTALE

The city of Camrose recently experienced a most divine event. Many citizens sat in awe, amazed and confused by the drama which was unfolding in front of their eyes. Many trembled, others scoffed....then the power went out! My god, it's the rapture, and their taking the churches with them!!

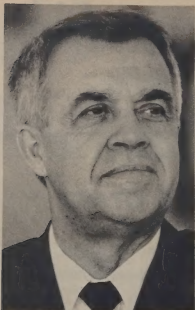

Actually, it was quite an amazing sight, but fortunately or unfortunately (depending on your particular religious preference or lack thereof) it was only a group of hard working engineers and construction men moving the performing arts centre on to the Augustana campus. The whole plan has been in the works for over a year and last week all of the hard work paid off and Augustana received it's newest "heat'n serve" building.

The performing arts centre probably won't be completed for some time, but if the drama that takes place inside its walls is anything like the drama that took place in getting the building here, I'm sure we will be (as the mission statement says) inspired with awe and wonder!

PRESIDENT JOHNSON HONOURED BY THE UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA

THE DAGLIGTALE

The University of Alberta at its fall convocation on November 19 will confer an honorary doctor of laws degree on K. Glen Johnson, president of Augustana University College. At the invitation of the university of Alberta, he will deliver the convocation address to the graduating students, their families and friends.

The distinction comes in recognition of the Rev. Dr. Johnson's lengthy and devoted service to his own institution in Camrose, to the private sector in Alberta's post-secondary system, and the higher education more widely.

In his 25th year as head of Augustana, the Rev. Dr. Johnson is the longest-serving president still active of any post-secondary institution in the country with membership in the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada.

EDUCATION ATTACKED BY GOVERNMENT

Sandra Rein

THE DAGLIGTALE

Alberta's Advanced Education Minister John Gogo once again stunned students and Albertans with a recent announcement indicating that the government is considering a proposal which would see all students seeking a second degree responsible for the full cost of their education.

Barry Pashak, New Democrat MLA, noted that "Mr. Gogo does not seem to understand that his ridiculous idea of having students pay the full cost of graduate work will result in Alberta losing its best students to other places - with no guarantee they will ever return to help build this province."

The implementation of Gogo's recent announcement would see all students in Alberta seeking a second degree or professional program (e.g. medicine or law) paying the full cost of receiving that education. In areas of technology and science, such costs easily exceed $10,000.00/year.

As if this announcement wasn't enough to cause students around the province to again question Minister Gogo's commitment to education, Gogo also floated the idea for "television teaching." This scenario would see teachers and professors replaced from kindergarten to graduate studies. No longer would students interact with real, living human beings, but with TVs. Gogo introduced his proposal with the comment, "If you watch movies, there are many good actors who are excellent teachers."

Student leaders in the province see these announcements as yet another Tory attack on Advanced Education.

The Alberta Representative to the Canadian Federation of Students, Sandeep Dhir, stated that "Clearly this Government is committed to one objective and that is to pay for their financial scandals, like NOVATEL, off the backs of students." Dhir went on to note that without adequate levels of student assistance and government support, education will soon become the realm of the rich and privileged. Ultimately, student leaders see these latest proposals as yet another way to decrease the accessibility of education in the province of Alberta.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

I recently noticed in the Edmonton Journal an article which I thought should be brought to the attention of the student body. This article has to do with the attitude towards the awareness of sexual assault. I thought the most appropriate way to do this would be to bring it to the Committee for Gender Issues. I went to the reception desk in Old Main, and discovered, much to my dismay, that the committee had been dissolved as Janet Wright, the chairperson for said committee, is presently on sabbatical. This is the reason for my letter.

I feel that this committee was dealing with some vital issues. While their technique left a little to be desired, their intentions were good, and they were making a good start. I also feel that there are many issues which a committee of this nature could and should deal with. This is not a subject of passing interest. It is becoming more and more important in this world of changing values. Everyone needs to be aware, or at least have the opportunity to become aware of vital issues in this area.

Many universities and colleges are starting to form committees on gender issues. I was happy that our university was starting to develop an awareness of the necessity for equality in academic as well as all other aspects of life. I regret having been wrong in this matter.

We, as students, and as citizens, have a need to change our awareness and our attitude in respect to equality of any type, be it race, gender or social involvement. If we plan to make a change in our world for the better, or even to fit in to it, we must do this. The Committee for Gender Issues is only a start, but it is a good one, and we should not let it "fall by the wayside," or we will be the ones to lose out in the end.

We should not let this happen, and I feel that we all should have and express some interest in this to the student government, as well as university administration. I have already sent a letter to Rebecca Packer, Vice President Internal of the Students' Union, and she will be approaching the administrative board as soon as possible. Let this be only a first step on the road to reforming this committee, and to greater equality within our institution and in general.

Lance Peters, Augustana Student

SAY 'NO' TO THE DEATH PENALTY

OFF THE "DEEP" END

Sandeep Dhir
THE DAGLIGTALE

In my last column, I made reference to the Capital Punishment debate. Little did I realize that this issue would be thrust upon our campus, like a powder-keg, for each of us to deal with.

After the failure of certain politicians to reintroduce Capital Punishment in 1987, I thought the issue was finally dead (no pun intended). Unfortunately, a new lobby has initiated the debate once again. This unholy coalition is made up of the neo-right-wing (dare we say fascist) dinosaurs and other members of our society upset by the recent brutal murders of young girls. Now they bring a petition to our campus demanding a return of state sanctioned murder.

People who sign this petition are doing so for two fundamentally wrong reasons. Firstly, they believe "capital punishment" (what a morally soothing phrase) will act as a deterrent to these heinous acts. In fact they believe that if Canada still had a law which allowed society to kill, the abduction and slaying of little girls or the senseless shooting of police officers would not occur. As comforting as this thought might be, it is absolutely not true.

The vast majority of murders (over 90 percent) are not what our legal system defines as first degree. That is murder committed with forethought and in "cold blood". Rather, most murders are committed without planning and in the "heat of the moment". Yet, the supporters of capital punishment (with

Dear Editor,

A week after first reading the Dag's inaugural editorial, I still feel my dander rise at the adversarial, uninformed nature of this piece of work. It is time to look at facts.

First, I agree with the editor's assertion that the title of the Student Services pamphlet (Sexual Harassment Guide) is not ideal. However, this is clearly not a "how-to" on sexual harassment; rather, it is a guide to aid victims in their struggle with disclosure and a tool of awareness, for both potential aggressors and potential victims.

Second, the quotations in the guide are drawn from the surveys administered by the President's Committee on Gender Issues. These quotations are included in the guide to make it clear that (a) sexual harassment does exist (everywhere) and b) that sexual harassment involves real people. The first quotation, "my boyfriend wouldn't take no for an answer", does refer to date rape, as the editor notes. The editor implies that this quotation clouds the definition of sexual harassment; she implies that sexual harassment and sexual assault are two completely disparate phenomena. In fact, one can argue that rape is in fact sexual harassment taken to the nth degree. Further, if this initial quotation grabs one person's attention, compelling s/he to read on and to think about abusive situations, then I would assert that this quotation is useful.

their flawed logic) would have us believe that in the midst of an angry exchange someone about to commit murder will stop and think, "Hey, I might get executed for this". Please!! Give me a break!

And on the other hand, for the handful of murders that are pre-planned and commissioned, common sense dictates that these persons will not be deterred by any future sanction.

In fact the famous Illich study in the United States proved that capital punishment was not an additional deterrent to murder.

The second reason people will sign this petition is raw emotion. No one who has watched the news in the past few weeks can help but be upset. Now if people sign for this reason, they

Third, the statement that the list of the contact numbers (eg. for the University Counsellors) "smacks of lipservice" is unreasonable. All of the professionals who are listed are trained to deal with people who have been involved with sexual harassment and/or sexual assault. The University Counsellors are an integral part of these contacts, because of their gifts and training but also due to their unique window on university life.

Fourth, the editor blasts the naive "powers that be" at Augustana, asserting that there are no mechanisms for dealing with sexual harassment. In this regard, the editor is correct, but only partly so. During the 1991-92 academic year, the President's Committee on Gender Issues met every week for five consecutive months. During this five month period, the committee drafted a comprehensive report ranging from the current state of gender issues at Augustana to specific suggestions on achieving gender balance among faculty. According to information received from other universities which have undertaken similar endeavours, this process requires an average of three years. Clearly, the work of the committee demonstrates that there is a general will to address gender issues. I would remind the editor that Augustana is currently operating under an interim president, and that the report on gender issues will probably not be addressed until President Johnson's return in October. Certainly, this is no time for complacency, but neither is it a time to make rash, uninformed accusations. Further, the current lack of official mechanisms does not mean that college officials intend to turn a blind eye when confronted with cases of sexual harassment.

I would suggest that the editor delve more deeply into the real issues before her next editorial. I would even suggest that she do some research.

Perhaps if the editor really wants to know who wrote the contents of that innocuous-looking, light-green, how-to manual on sexual harassment, she should speak to Jim Hunter, the current SU president, who sat on the Students' Affairs Committee which approved this infamous, tore-killing document. Further, before the editor pens her next diatribe, I would suggest that she review the principles of gender neutral language. (eg. When the Editor sits down to write her editorial, she...) Female chauvinism is no better than the male variety.

are really seeking revenge. Notwithstanding that this desire is in contradiction of the teachings of every major religion, murder for emotional gratification, even if it is state sanctioned, is no better than the original crime we were trying to punish.

So when I am asked to sign this petition, I will sympathize with the anger and frustration that the person is feeling. Sympathize yes, but sign the petition? Not on your life. I hope you do the same.

RAMBLINGS OF A WANDERING MIND

Brad Macintosh

THE DAGLITALE

Well, another Wednesday has come, gone, and left me behind to deal with the aftermath. There is always a little "Je ne sai quois" about Wednesdays. Nothing is ever written about Tuesday or Thursday—except in the Bowling Report; yet, Wednesdays seem to get a fair amount of press (or at least in this addition). Mondays are despised except on the occasional long weekend while Fridays are God's little way of rewarding us for making it through the week. Of course, weekends, being Saturday and Sunday, are great sources of inspiration to all. Much has been documented in novels as well as court reports when dealing with weekends.

More on Wednesdays. Actually, let's just skip Wednesdays as there really isn't anything that exciting about them other than Sieinfeld and it can be taped for viewing on the weekend anyways.

Just a quick look around campus tells me that I am indeed at university. Anyone else get the same feeling? Nothing a doctor can do about this one, as it is indeed highly contagious.

Rumour has it that come May it mysteriously clears up. But hey, there are no guarantees—except at MacDonalds.

I was wondering if it would be at all possible to suck the filling out of a bismark and not have it collapse. Just thinking about it sends a chill down your dog's tail, doesn't it? I encourage some of the faithful Dag readers to investigate the possibility of this and let me know in the 3LF column.

Anyone listening to "the Bear" lately? It seems that the topic of space babies has arisen due, in part, to the husband and wife astronaut team being about the latest shuttle mission. Much discussion has taken place about "zero gravity birth". My main concern would be whether or not the kid would be a "down to earth" type or not. Maybe CLCR could shed a little light on this subject.

Perhaps it is time to end with this thought...better to have a bottle in front of me...I seem to have forgotten the rest. Have fun!

Mass Moshing at the Alice and the U of A

THE DAGLITALE

Alice Hotel

Band: Godfrey Black

This group of five, including fellow student Scott Stover, played to a rather limited crowd, but the intensity level was still high. Loyal fans and regulars to the Alice were kept hopping by such tunes as "Hard to Handle" by the Black Crowes, "All Day and All Night" by the Kinks, "Long Cool Woman" by the Hollies, and various other classics.

The music played, the people danced with a select few trying to start a mosh-fest and then deciding to limit themselves to a two to three person or even a self mosh. It was a gathering of different ages and groups all gathered for the same purpose, to hear their favourite songs delivered by local favourites Dave, Jim, Scott, Brent, and lead singer Al. If you missed them this time around make sure to keep October 31 (yes that is Hallowe'en) open for because they will be back at the Alice Hotel for their traditional Hallowe'en appearance that has become a landmark. Keep your eyes on the bulletin boards for more details.

Bands: The Pursuit of Happiness
Feeding Like Butterflies
The Village Idiots

For twenty-four years, the fraternity of Delta Kappa Epsilon has been putting on Bear Country and every year they have a party for college and university students. It involves one major act followed by two lesser known, usually local, bands. This year, surrounded by almost a ridiculous amount of security and fraternity representatives, the party waged on yet again.

Opening up were The Village Idiots, from St. Albert, and their name gives a good indication of their stage presence. The crowd was entertained by mediocre music covers and a blow-up sex doll as well as the lead singer sporting a plastic dingly-dangly from his button-flies. Humorous in some situations, but we were there to hear good music.

The next act was definitely more encouraging, the band, Feeding Like Butterflies, was believed to hail from Toronto. This band was a good act to precede the headlines. They revved the crowd with original songs as well as some covers. Whether the amount of beer-intake of the crowd or the level of energy produced by the band, the crowd intensity was heightened and prepared for the final band, The Pursuit of Happiness. From start to finish the band, led by Moe Berg, kept the crowd moshing intensely, with stage-diving and body surfing discouraged by removing the die-hard, dedicated performers of this sport out in the rain with re-access denied. The fans were treated to classics from the past and a preview of next year's release. The finale of a medley of artists from Buddy Holly to Ozzy Osbourne was a lead up to the cover of Prince's "When Doves Cry", both of which were enthusiastically received by the spectators. After being called back for and delivering an encore, The Pursuit of Happiness left the stage, heralding the end of yet another successful Bear Country. Stay tuned for next year when the tradition continues.

STUDENTS' UNION NOTES

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Jim Hunter

THE DAGLIGHTALE

I am finding it very difficult to sit in class and hear all of the sniffling, sneezing and coughing that is going on. This is a problem that comes up when you gather large number of people into small places - colds and the flu run rampant. I too have fallen victim to the virus! So this only goes to show you that Presidents are people too. Enough about me. The Students' Union will be holding it's first General Meeting for the 1992-93 term on October 13, 1992 at 7:00 p.m. Although at this time, I don't know where! The chosen venue will be made known as soon as possible.

I really appreciate people coming up to me and making suggestions. I will ensure that they are brought to Council's attention. Keep it up! Your suggestions are not falling on deaf ears. Council will look at each and every one of them and will try to make some of them work. Some of the suggestions are not monetarily feasible at this time. However, I will put them in my year end Presidential Report so that they can be looked at in years when there is a little bit more money floating around.

Congratulations to our new councillors: First Year Reps: Sandeep Dhir and Ron Jahnke; Off Campus Reps: Troy Geldart and Wayne Sosnowski; Off Campus Over 25 Rep: Brad Macintosh; Foreign Student Rep: Sonya Lui Vasquez. We will put them to work immediately as the Students' Union has a lot of work to do.

That's it for now. See you next issue!!

POTATO IMPLANT SAVES TROUBLED MARRIAGE

Miss Savannah Maples

THE DAGLIGTALE

Desperate, and on the verge of divorce, Mr. and Mrs. Bo-bo Fletcher didn't know where to turn. Then, a small advertisement in the back of "Today's Tubers" changed their lives. They placed their tabloid marriage in the hands of Dr. Samuel Scallop at the Idaho State Vegetable Clinic in Shelly, Idaho.

The Silver Springs, Oklahoma couple's frustrations began in 1984, shortly after their marriage. Like many young couples, they wanted to have a family. "Kids are really important to us," said Bo-bo. He and Ethel however, ran into unexpected problems. Over the years, the tension mounted.

The Diagnosis: Fertility problems. Gradually, Bo-bo and Ethel's marriage fell apart. "One of the reasons we got married was to have kids," said Bo-bo.

"I was quite upset," lamented Ethel. "Without children, our marriage was a sham. I mean if we couldn't have kids, why bother having sex?"

Then, just at the moment they were contemplating divorce, their luck changed. Bo-bo is an avid amateur potato grower. "I truly enjoy spuds," said Bo-bo. "They're easy as heck to grow, and you can do so much with 'em. I even have a neighbour who's an artist who carves little state sculptures out of 'em." Bo-bo was a subscriber to "Today's Tubers" (The Journal of the Amateur Potato Entrepreneur). He would often wile away the hours reading back issues, trying to take his mind off their Problem. "They were bad times."

Then, one day, Bo-bo found hope. A small ad from the Idaho State Vegetable Clinic (in the classified section of "Today's Tubers") caught his eye. "They noted all kind of miracle cures.

We'd tried a bunch of others, but we were willing to give it one last go. And we're sure glad we did!"

The Fletchers checked into the famed Idaho State Vegetable Clinic. The clinic, which provides everything from horticulture therapy (in which the mentally distraught find peace of mind amongst rows of tender young legumes) to human/plant hybridizing (for people who require plant replacements for amputated body parts), was prepared. Dr. Scallop, a renowned obstetrician and potato implant pioneer, knew the situation was critical. "The Fletcher's had already tried nearly every approach known to man. The potato implant technique was their only hope," said Dr. Scallop. "We didn't want to see their marriage mashed by childlessness."

In a dangerous, experimental procedure, Dr. Scallop implanted an ultra-thin potato wedge (about the size of a shoestring potato) just under the skin above Ethel's navel. "The theory is quite simple," said Scallop. "Potatoes are notoriously fertile- you can put just about any potato in the ground and it'll grow. Somehow, this fertility is transferable to humans. We don't understand the mechanism- all we know is, it works!"

Within two weeks of the implant, (and after 10 days of unsupervised, after visiting hours cohabitation) Ethel and Bo-bo were expecting! Their marriage was saved by Dr. Scallop's brilliant potato implant. Ethel experienced only one side effect- a perfectly harmless craving for mashed potatoes, french fries, and potato chips. "I was fond of double-bakes," drooled Ethel.

At 1:42 a.m., on May 23rd, Ethel went into labour. Bo-bo held his wife's hand as she was wheeled into the delivery room for the first time in their eight years of marriage. Two hours later, their life was changed forever- by quadruplets! "We went in to the hospital childless, and we came out with a whole arm full of tots!" said studmeister Bo-bo. Firstborn Scallopini (named in honour of Dr. Scallop) sounded her arrival cry and was placed into her Father's arms, followed quickly by Julienne, Duchesse, and Augret Ann. "Ethel, I don't know which one we should nickname Spud!" exclaimed proud Papa Fletcher.

At 6 pounds, 2 ounces apiece, all are quite healthy (with the exception of several potato eyes which have sprouted on their backs and toes. The eyes will be surgically removed next November.) The little ones also seem to prefer cool, dark places, but this is not seen as a problem.

HIGHWAY TO HEAVEN LEADS NEW PASTOR TO AUGUSTANA

Kenneth Fredrick

THE DAGLIGTALE

The Rev. Brian Heinrich has been appointed campus pastor at Augustana University College for the 1992-93 academic year. He took on the assignment from the Rev. Robert Pearson, a retired minister from Edmonton, who was attacked by ill health.

Born and raised in Vancouver, the Rev. Heinrich, only in his 30s, brings to the job wide-ranging experiences acquired in far-flung places.

A vicar in Saskatchewan in the early 1980s, he served a congregation in Oliver, British Columbia—that was his first parish—and then two Lutheran Churches in New York City. There, he operated a soup kitchen and shelter on the lower east side, and acted as chaplain to people with AIDS.

From New York, he went to the Yukon as minister of a church in Whitehorse. More recently, he was interim pastor to two congregations in Alberta, St. John's in Wetaskiwin, and Trinity in nearby Falun.

The Rev. Heinrich has travelled widely abroad. He lived for a year in a religious community in Darmstadt, Germany; toured Christian communities in exile in southeast Asia; and, just last year, visited Lutheran World Relief sites in Africa—he went to places like Togo, Benin, and Burkina Faso.

An artist and a photographer—he's had artworks and photos published—the Rev. Heinrich has conducted church retreats for youth and for people with disabilities.

A 1976 graduate of the Canadian Bible Institute in Camrose, he has earned three degrees at schools coast to coast; he received in 1979 a bachelor's degree in religious studies at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver; a master of divinity degree at Christ Seminary in St. Louis, Missouri, in 1983; and, in 1988, a master of sacred theology at the Center for Christian Spirituality, General Theological Seminary, in New York City.

OCC MEETING HEATED

Sandeep Dhir
Rebecca J. Packer

THE DAGLIGTALE

The Off Campus Council held its general meeting on September 30. This meeting's primary purpose was to elect a new executive for the upcoming year. Fifteen enthusiastic, sometimes chanting students attended the meeting.

Kim Rewuski, a second year student, was elected President in a narrow, hotly contested election. Observers who wished to remain anonymous attributed Rewuski's victory to her strong grass roots support, and the financial backing of the Camrose Chamber of Commerce. A clearly elated Rewuski stated, "It's my goal to provide off campus students with the kind of representation they deserve. I look forward to a challenging year."

In the other contest of the night, Wayne Somowski was easily elected Vice-President.

Although there were persistent rumours that another candidate would throw her/his hat into the ring for this most sought after position, no one did. When asked if he had future political ambitions, Somowski replied with a sincere "no comment."

The meeting tabled elections for the positions of Secretary and Treasurer, until the next meeting. While there were many qualified people at the meeting and two students were potentially nominated, both of these potential candidates declined the nomination.

When these reporters were forced to leave early due to print deadlines, the meeting was just beginning to erupt into "Off Campus Solidarity Forever."

Good luck to the new OCC executive as they embark on a challenging year. And for those off campus students who missed the meeting—you had to be there to believe it!

We're offering a Student Success course for new and returning students on TTh mornings or afternoons. This 10 week course teaches methods that promote success at university. Classes began on Sept. 22, but students are still encouraged to sign up.

A 'Job Search Techniques' course is now being organized. Anyone who is interested can call Eva at 679-1194 or visit the CRC. The updated 'Job Search and Resume Writing Guide' from U of A is also being sold through the CRC.

Want to volunteer but don't know where to go? Look through our Volunteer Information File to discover who needs your help.

AT THE RINK

Keith Mackintosh
THE DAGLIGTALE

Howdy hockey fans! The exhibition season has begun and the Vikings are off and running with a winning attitude. The season started with the NAIT Blue and Gold Classic on September 18, 19, and 20. An opening match-up on Friday afternoon pitted the Vikes against the U of A Golden Bears in a contest that turned out to be a very positive first taste for the Vikes.

The traditionally powerful Bears had their hands full with the Vikings in a game where the lead changed five times. In the end the Bears prevailed nailing the game shut on a 8 - 6 victory, with an empty net goal with 5 seconds remaining in the 3 period.

On Saturday night the Vikings met the defending ACAC champion, the NAIT Ooks. On this night a different Viking squad took the ice. The team came out flat and the end result was a 5 - 1 loss at the hands of the Ooks. The Vikings at times controlled the play but a combination of lack of finish around the net and penalty problems left the Vikes on the short end of the stick on this night.

The third game of the tourney was a preview of the years home opener between the Vikes and the Red Deer College Kings. From the opening face-off the Vikes seemed to be in total control, except for 3 break down moments, the shots told the story. The Vikes out shot Red Deer 47 - 26 and turned in an exciting 4 - 3 overtime win. The win seemed to boost the Vikings to a new level because it has sparked the team to win their last three games in a row.

The team travelled to North Battleford for a game against the Jr. North Stars. The Vikes started slow after the long bus ride, but shifted into high gear mid-way through the 2nd period and skated to a 6 - 2 victory over the North Stars.

The Vikings continued their winning ways last Friday night against the newest team in the ACAC, the Concordia College Mustangs. For the Mustangs, it was their first test against an ACAC team. The Vikes exploded out of the gate and opened a 5 - 0 lead in the first period. The Vikings maintained the strong effort leading 8 - 1 after the 2nd period and won the game with a 12 - 1 final score.

The Vikes will try and keep the winning streak going on this Friday night when they host the Concordia College Mustangs. This will be the first home game for the home town team and the support of the Augustana student body will help promote the new winning attitude. Game time is 8:00pm at the Camrose Recreation Centre Arena, so wear Red and show your support for your Viking Hockey Team. See you at the Rink and remember "Keep your stick on the ice."

THE DAGLIGTALE

Another week in this world has it been, kicking and gesticulating, in this the 10th year of CLCR existence. The schedule is filling out rather nicely with the help of 60 on-air DJs. But there's still lots of room for you. Contact the SU office and drop out, err... I mean drop off your name and contact number. There's still a lot of room for public affairs and spoken word programming. If your club, faculty, or ideological underground strychnine cult has any ideas, the static is here for all of us. Feel free to use our request line @ 672-2999. Discord can be beautiful.

Sundays

Justin and Brent 4:00 - 5:00:
Various, Multi-faceted. Defies description.

Ron and Ryan 5:00 - 6:00:
Another 60 minute plethora.

Nancie and Denise 6:00 - 7:00:
Sunday night variety.

Experimental Evening 7:00 - 8:00:
Corry and Angie serve a heapin' helpin' of...well...stuff.

Anathema 8:00 - 9:00:
Something for everyone to hate. Hosted by Kari.

Vexation/ Cliff: The Infinite Improbability Hour 9:00 - 10:00

Along with the honour (?) of the longest show title, its also the only one that alternates from week to week. Join Chad for Vexation, music to lower one's threshold for throwing the aforementioned body into immovable objects repeatedly. Synapse skewering, mechanical noise. Cliff: concise, not wordy.

Probe 11:00 - Incoherency:
Dogman takes a big bite out of that soft spot in your brain. Believe me. Mastication music.

ALBERTA GOVERNMENT'S POLICY ON ENDANGERED SPACES GET FAILING GRADE

Mark Evans

THE DAGLIGTALE

The World Wildlife Fund of Canada has released its "Endangered Spaces Progress Report" for 1992. Disappointingly Alberta has scored very poorly with a D, in fact, only New Brunswick scored worse than Alberta with a D-.

Alberta in the past year has not significantly increased new protected wilderness areas and no funds have been provided for the acquisition of new parks. Instead money is thrown away on disasters like NovaTel and to build pulp mills like Dishawa that destroy the environment.

Overall, Alberta is still not committed and is procrastinating on action to protect our endangered spaces. In comparison, Prince Edward Island, who scored the highest, has designated 16 new protected sites in addition to the establishment of 7 private reserves. P.E.I. has also increased the fund for new protected areas and intends to have an additional 25 sites protected by the spring of 1993. Alberta's pathetic showing is appalling considering that it is one of the more wealthy provinces in the country and supposedly has a government which is committed to the environment.

Monte Hummel, the president of WWF Canada described the diverse beauty of our wilderness areas as being Canada's soul and said, "we want to know Canada's soul is being protected, so that it remains 'out there' to be felt by future generations."

The WWF encourages anyone interested in being involved to contact them for more information by phoning 1-800-26-PANDA or by writing them at 90 Elington Avenue E., Suite 504, Toronto, Ontario M4P 2Z7

DID YOU KNOW?

Kissing is not a health hazard. According to Dr. Timothy Snakary, a West Coast specialist in infectious diseases, it is "a common assumption that kissing spreads colds. But some interesting studies have been done where cold-free people kissed people with colds, and the bug just didn't spread."

Eating chocolate doesn't cause pimples. Recent studies indicate that there is no evidence to link chocolate with pimples. Instead pimples are probably linked with increased levels of sex hormones. And genetics may well play a part.

Where, you might ask are all the miracles? Well, perhaps right where they've always been. Because surely all of life remains nothing less than a miracle.

On that note, we'll leave you until next issue. And, as the philosopher said, "Be kind, for everyone you meet is fighting a hard battle."
